

Professor Alexandra Stolzing, PhD was born in Bonn, Germany, where she studied Biology before focusing on aging and regenerative medicine at Charite Berlin, the Kroto Tissue Engineering Institute Sheffield, UK, and the Fraunhofer Institute Leipzig, Germany. Currently she is a full Professor for Biogerontological Engineering at Loughborough University UK, and Vice President for Research at the SENS Foundation, a Silicon-Valley based research charity promoting the application of regenerative medicine to aging.